

January 25, 2011

Product: Stainless Steel Pry Bar

Manufacturer: Stiletto

Value Rating: Hot Item

First of all, we're sorry. We know there is a part of you that hates journalists like us that get to go to tradeshow and play with the new tools long before they are released to the public. It's not fair and we acknowledge that. But let us make it up to you. First, keep your eyes glued to our front page for the next few weeks. You're going to see everything we saw and learn all about the stuff you'll be adding to your Christmas list. Until we can get it all posted (hey, we have to sleep too), here are the top 5 products that really impressed us from the 2011 International Builder's Show \(IBS\) show in Orlando.

1) Polished Solid Stainless Steel Pry Bars From Stiletto

Stiletto is the company known for bringing us solid titanium hammers and titanium pry bars. The trouble with titanium is that it is a little on the costly side, so to help some more budget-conscious customers, the engineers at Stiletto are working on an entire new line of polished stainless steel pry bars. While we reviewed the titanium versions of these new bars, we're looking forward to consumers being able to experience them for less. You can expect to see these available later this year.